1. Facility Condition Assessment: What's the point? Facility Condition Assessments, can be critical tools in discovering the overall health of your facility. 2. Capital Planning: Now What? – From with the Facility Condition Assessment, organizations can begin to take the next steps in forecasting their budgeting requirements. We'll focus on why Capital Planning is so important, how to do it effectively and some of the challenges you can expect to face during that process.
3. Risk Mitigation: What does a Work Order have to do with it? – This portion of the presentation focuses more on the core process of documenting work each day, why PM is important, and what to expect from a true Computerized Maintenance Management System, or CMMS (including how to communicate to the board, how to justify funding, how to show progress, etc.)

Speaker Bio

Luke Anderson is a Lead Application Engineer specializing in Membership and Government markets. Prior to joining The Dude, Luke worked in the Energy Automation and Building Technologies industry working directly with colleges and universities in North Carolina. It is during his time working with those education institutions that he developed a passion around making our communities/private clubs more efficient and effective at the work they do. Luke found great success in working in the construction plan/bid/spec world, but his passion wasn't there. His current role as Enterprise Application Engineer allows Luke to engage with the leaders and members of communities/private clubs across the country, and help them to operate safe, efficient, clean buildings.
